... and finally

Prayer Wall

Please continue to pray for Marie who is currently receiving extensive physio at Bognor Regis Memorial Hospital. The team looking after Marie are gradually getting things together for her to go home. Please pray for ongoing healing, a carefully thought out care plan and a successive return to her home. Do thank the Lord, that despite all of the trauma that Marie has been through, she remains as cheerful as ever.

Please pray urgently for Rachel and William as Rachel is pregnant but is very sick with it. Rachel has been on a drip and had various other treatment but she is very dehydrated at present. This must also be very upsetting for Charlie and the rest of the family. Please pray urgently for healing and peace of mind for the whole family.

Please also pray for Ian Surrell who is still receiving treatment at St. Richard's hospital. Please pray that the doctors can come with a plan that will meet Ian's needs. Please pray too for Jon Crome who is at Richard's with breathing difficulties and high blood pressure. Pray too for Michelle who is struggling to cope at present.

Then he got up and rebuked the winds and the waves, and it was completely calm. 'You of little faith, why are you so afraid?'– Matthew 8:26 (NIV)

Life's storms don't always come with crashing waves — sometimes they arrive quietly through unexpected news, uncertainty, or anxiety. This poem reflects on the fears we face in today's world and reminds us that, even in the silence, Jesus is still present. He doesn't shame us for our fear — He gently invites us to trust Him again.

Still, He Is with Me

The phone call came, the voice was low,
The news hit hard, too much to know.
The questions came, the answers fled—
And fear moved in, uninvited, unsaid.

The bills piled high, the work ran dry,
A silent ache, a worried sigh.
The world kept spinning, fast and wide,
But peace was lost, and hope would hide.

The room fell quiet, the night grew long,
The silence sang a fearful song.
The things once certain slipped away—
And courage failed by light of day.

Yet in the stillness came a breath,
Not loud, not harsh, not full of depth—
But just enough to make me see
That He was still right here with me.

He didn't scold, He didn't leave,
He only whispered, 'Just believe.'
Then gently asked with love, not dread:
'Why are you so afraid?' He said.
